CRITICAL COMMENTARY

232 Contributors to Dysbiosis in Very-Low-Birth-Weight Infants

The authors describe gut microbiome dysbiosis in preterm infants, related influencing factors, and potential for inflammatory outcomes.

Maureen W. Groer, Elizabeth M. Miller, Amy D'Agata, Thao T. B. Ho, Samia V. Dutra, Ji Youn Yoo, Alyson L. Yee, Jack A. Gilbert, and Larry J. Dishaw

REVIEWS

243 Systematic Review and Meta-Analysis of the Effect of Nutrients on Blood Lead Levels in Pregnancy

Nutritional interventions may benefit pregnant women with current lead exposure or histories of elevated lead levels, particularly women with calcium or iron-deficient diets.

Katie G. McElroy, Stacey E. Iobst, Crystal DeVance-Wilson, Emilie Ludeman, and Erik Barr

254 Integrative Review of Nursing Practices in Fetal Therapy

Nurses have made important contributions to fetal therapy, an evolving practice that is a critical component of comprehensive patient- and family-centered care.

Abigail Wilpers, Katie Francis, Susan S. Spinner, and Holly Powell Kennedy

263 Metasynthesis of Factors That Influence Parents' Participation in Pain Management for Their Infants in the NICU

Through this qualitative metasynthesis, the authors identified four themes related to the factors that influence parents' participation in pain management for their infants in the NICU.

Carol McNair, Nevart Chinian, Vibhuti Shah, Mary McAllister, Linda S. Franck, Bonnie Stevens, Lisa Burry, and Anna Taddio

RESEARCH

272 Randomized Controlled Simulation Trial to Compare Transfer Procedures for Emergency Cesarean

There was no statistically significant evidence that a cap and run procedure reduced time to readiness for general anesthesia during simulated preparation for emergency cesarean.

Jill Mhyre, Nicole Ward, Teresa M. Whited, and Michael Anders

283 Emotional Work of Neonatal Nurses in a Single-Family Room NICU

Single-family room NICUs can increase or decrease the emotional demands on nurses.

PRINCIPLES & PRACTICE

- 293 Congenital Cytomegalovirus and Hearing Loss
 Congenital cytomegalovirus infection can cause serious and lifelong disabilities in newborns, infants, and children; therefore, this education update for health care providers who care for childbearing women is essential.
Diane W. Andronaco

METHODS

- 305 Validity and Reliability of the Antepartum Gastrointestinal Symptom Assessment Instrument
 Findings provided preliminary evidence for the validity and reliability of a new nine-item antepartum gastrointestinal symptom assessment.
Lisa Hanson, Leona VandeVusse, Mauricio Garnier-Villarreal, Donna McCarthy, Teresa Jerofke-Owen, Emily Malloy, and Heidi Paquette

SPECIAL REPORT

- 315 Current Resources for Evidence-Based Practice, May 2020

ATTENTION ARTISTS! JOGNN Call for Original Cover Art for Volume 50 (2021)

2021 marks JOGNN's 50th anniversary. The Editorial Advisory Board and Editors are planning ways to celebrate this achievement, and one way is to invite the submission of original art that symbolizes nurses' care of women, childbearing families, and newborns. We know that there are artists among the thousands of nurses who read JOGNN! Six submissions will be chosen to adorn the covers of Issues 1 through 6 of Volume 50. Requirements are as follow:

- Electronic image of original art in the form of a painting or drawing (no photography). Credit will be attributed to the artist.
- The dimensions of the piece must be 2 to 3 times longer than it is wide to fit on the art panel on JOGNN's cover. Please consult a current cover.
- A high-resolution image of the art of at least 300 dpi must be submitted. The image file may be submitted as *.JPG or *.TIF. For more information see Elsevier's guidelines on the submission of artwork and media.
- Color art is preferred although black and white also will be considered.
- Submissions will be accepted until June 1, 2020. Send submissions and questions to jognn@awhonn.org
